ABOUT Us

The Capital Region Society for Technology in Education (CRSTE) provides coordination and support of technology organizations and educators in the national capital region.

OUR MISSION

The Capital Region Society for Technology in Education (CRSTE) promotes cohesion and collaboration among existing agencies and organizations that promote twenty-first century learning through technology in education throughout the national capital region.

OUR VISION

The Capital Region Society for Technology in Education (CRSTE) creates synergy across the national capital region for advocacy, infrastructure, policy, practice, professional development and strategies that promote the infusion of instructional technology across the curriculum in public and private PreK-12 education and higher education.

OUR GOALS

Provide value-added benefits to members of existing educational technology organizations participating in CRSTE through the sharing of ideas, opportunities and resources.

Promote accessibility to professional development opportunities across the national capital region.

Advocate for instructional technology at the state and federal levels.

Serve as a forum for technology leaders in the national capital region.

Build partnerships between PreK-12, higher education and private industry.

Utilize technology to collaborate nationally and globally with like-minded partners.

Invite pre-service teachers to participate through regional teacher training programs.
